Kakapo: Back from the Brink

Codfish Island is a conservation success story of international proportions and is a very special place, a must see place in our opinion. The island supports 90% of the world's Kakapo. These are large, flightless, nocturnal parrots and have been brought back from the brink of extinction with the help of Department of Conservation, hundreds of volunteers and support from Forest & Bird and Rio Tinto Alcan. Let Detlef, Carol & Suzi tell you about the volunteering work they did on Codfish Island. World total now stands at 124.
